Launch points are grouped within 1 mile and labeled by airport code where there is one.

Patterns

About 70% of flights are evening flights, 22% are in the morning, and only 8% are midday. Fall is almost as busy as summer thanks to harvest photo flights, and weekdays see nearly as much flying as weekends.

Flights with video

Scott's YouTube channel (youtube.com/c/scottrichardsonppc) has 356 public videos. 317 of them are matched to 286 flights in this history. Each video was matched by the date in its title or description, then its upload date, place names and airport codes, and morning or evening hints on days with more than one flight. High means a dated title with one clear flight; medium means the date is clear but the leg on a busy day is a judgment call; low means an undated video matched by upload date and is a best guess.

Flights with Facebook photos

Scott's Facebook photo posts were matched to 111 flights. A photo is matched when its time (from the camera, or read from the date stamped in its lower-left corner) falls within the flight, and its position (camera GPS or the stamped lat/lon) is within half a mile of the GPS track at that moment. High means time and position agree; medium means the time matches but the photo has no readable position (or only a partly read stamp); low means the time matches but the position is more than half a mile from the track. Each link opens the full Facebook post (all photos and the caption). A few posts could not be given a post link, so those open the first matched photo instead. Facebook may ask you to log in.

361,042 photos in Scott's Lightroom catalog were taken during a logged flight (matched by clock-corrected camera time to the flight window); 47,886 of them (13%) were also posted on Facebook. 242 of 516 flights have photos. Golden hour (the hour after sunrise or before sunset) accounts for 43% of them.

About the data

- Flights were taken from GPS track logs, with driving and ground handling removed and duplicate files counted once.
- Hours and miles combine the pilot logbook, GPS tracks and 2026 engine-monitor data, so each flight appears once.
